Dr. David P. Baker, PhD

Dr. David P. Baker is the Executive Vice President of the Center for Research, Evaluation and Implementation (CREI) at IMPAQ International. Previously, he served as IMPAQ's Chief Program Officer and led IMPAQ's Health Policy Research Division for two years. Since 2002, Dr. Baker's work has focused on health care and the critical role teams play in the safe and efficient delivery of health services. He is a nationally recognized expert in team performance, training, patient safety, and quality improvement. He is most recognized for his work on the Agency for Healthcare Research and Quality's (AHRQ) TeamSTEPPS® program, including participating in the development of the program in 2004. He has also consulted with hospitals within the U.S. and abroad on issues related to teamwork, care delivery, and patient safety. Prior to joining IMPAQ, Dr. Baker was Director of the Health Services Research Institute at the Carilion Clinic and served as an Associate Professor on the founding faculty of the Virginia Tech Carilion School of Medicine. Dr. Baker is a fellow of the Society for Industrial and Organizational Psychology and has published and presented numerous papers on his work.