

M. Sean Rogers, MD

Sean Rogers is a board-certified practicing internist in addition to his executive responsibilities. He attended medical school at Bowman Gray School of Medicine at Wake Forest University in Winston-Salem, NC and subsequently completed his internship and residency at the University of California San Diego, where he was also named Chief Medical Resident. Dr. Rogers was in private practice in Vista, CA for 7 years before joining Bend Memorial Clinic (BMC) in Bend, OR in 2005. While at BMC, he served as the Internal Medicine Department Chair for 9 years, Medical Director for 7 years, and Chief Compliance Officer for 3 years. In addition, he has sat on numerous clinical quality committees and healthcare boards.

He joined the Polyclinic in Seattle, WA in July 2014 as the Medical Director for Primary Care Services. In this role he is charged with guiding the organization along its path towards healthcare transformation and care delivery redesign with an emphasis on continuous process improvement.

In his spare time, Dr. Rogers is currently pursuing an MBA degree and enjoys spending time outdoors with his wife and their dog Riley. In particular, they enjoy running, biking, and skiing together.